The enablement rejection was discussed, especially relating to the in vivo evidence provided in the examples of the disclosure and in the declaration of Ian MacLachlan, filed March 18, 2002, which provided various tumor reduction studies using the various lipid formulations disclosed in the instant disclosure. The modes of administration of the lipids and effector molecules were also discussed, which included in vivo administration distal to the tumor sites. Several effector molecules were shown to reduce tumor growth, including cytokines, tumor suppressors and suicide enzymes, some of which provided in vivo as well as in vitro results.
